CAYMAN'S HOMAGE TO THE CARIBBEAN
VERNACULAR WITH A RADICAL GREEN TWIST

Ditching your kit is easy when wearing a unique Tribe bikini. Hand painted in Rio de Janeiro, each swim suit is made from organic cottons, supports local artisans and uses azo free dye to create a bikini as individual as you are. www.olgaolsson.com

Got wood? These chic shades deliver, covering my peepers in style with polarised lenses and a fabulous frame made from sustainable wood. www.shwoodshop.com

It is easy to enjoy the motion of the tropical ocean on Kun_tiqi's surfboards. Handcrafted and comprised of renewable resources, these balsa wood boards provide stability and flexibility for high performance rides while lessening my impact on the environment. www.kuntiqi.com

EDITOR'S obsessions

By Kyle Fulton

Packed with antioxidants and nutrients, VeeV quenches the call for a sundowner while delivering all natural ingredients. Using soy ink for their labels and partially recycled bottles, they also donate one dollar of all sales to Sambazon's Sustainable Açai Project. Cheers to that! www.veevlife.com

Fresh and funky, these sturdy sacks stash up small making them the perfect carryall to bring anywhere. Made from ripstop nylon, they are lightweight, roomy and available in a bevy of eye-catching combinations. www.flipandtumble.com

Inspired by nature, this sterling silver coral pendant adds subtle tropical flare to any outfit. Made in the US Virgin Islands, it is a classy reminder of island life. www.isolabellashop.com

Lathering up in Reef Safe sunscreen protects me from the elements while easing my mind. Completely biodegradable and non-toxic to sea-life. FDA approved, broad spectrum, waterproof and sweatproof, it begs me to get outside and enjoy all the Caribbean has to offer. www.tropicalseas.com
